

The world needs leaders . . .

- Who use their influence at the right times for the right reasons;
- Who take a greater share of the blame and a smaller share of the credit;
- Who lead themselves successfully before attempting to lead others;
- Who add value to the people and the organization they lead;
- Who work for the benefit of others and not for personal gain;
- Who handle themselves with their head and handle others with their heart;
- Who inspire and motivate rather than intimidate and manipulate;
- Who live with people to know their problems and apply their guiding principles in order to solve them;
- Who realize that their dispositions are more important than their positions;
- Who understand that an institution is a reflection of their character;
- Who never place themselves above others except in carrying responsibilities;
- Who will be as honest in small things as in great things;
- Who discipline themselves so they will not be disciplined by others;
- Who encounter setbacks and turn them into comebacks, and
- Who follow a moral compass that points in the right direction regardless of the trends.
